

THE HIGHLANDS HOTEL

The Highlands Hotel was originally built as a lodge by the Marquis of Conyngham and later acquired by Patrick O'Donnell who opened it as a hotel in 1899. It has remained as a hotel since then with the ownership passing from the O'Donnells to Mrs. Hamill, to D.D. Sweeny and then on to a local man John Boyle in 1948.

In 1950 John Boyle married Annie McCready from Lettermacaward. Annie put her own unique stamp on the business immediately and the Highlands became renowned, far and wide, for its fine food and great hospitality.

In 1978 John and Annie's son Johnny and his wife Christine acquired the adjoining Hugh McDevitt institute 'The Tech' and renovated it to expand the existing building.

*I'm going back to Glenties when the harvest fields are brown, And the Autumn sunset lingers on my little Irish town, When the gossamer is shining where the moorland blossoms blow I'll take the road across the hills
I tramped so long ago-
'Tis far I am beyond the seas, but yearning voices call,
"Will you not come back to Glenties, and your wave-washed Donegal?"*
